

Exhilarating Indie: Become your own publisher

A workshop with Carol Cram

Saturday, October 4

9 am - noon

Gallery @ Artisan Square

$40 per person or
$35 BIAC member

Authors all over the world are taking back control of the publishing process to reach readers and sell books.

Thanks to the Internet and Print on Demand (POD) technology, you can easily meet your own publishing and marketing goals. This three-hour workshop teaches you the basics of “indie” publishing with topics that include creating work you’re proud to sell, publishing it online and in print, and successfully marketing it to readers.

About the Workshop Leader:

After decades of writing textbooks for a traditional publisher, Carol Cram decided to take control of her new career as a novelist. She “indie” published her first novel The Towers of Tuscany in early 2014 and in the process learned a great deal of what to do (and not do!). In May of 2014, Lake Union Publishing in the US acquired Carol’s novel. She remains a firm advocate of independent publishing as a positive way to break into the market for thousands of authors.
